Consequences of Revolt

End Of Company's Rule

- Government of India Act 1858 – Bruster of power to government India from the east India company to British crown.
- Company's board of control and court of directions abolished.
- A Member of British Cabinet was appointed secretary of state for India - responsible for all matters related to governance of India.
- He was assisted by a council called Indian Council.

- Governor - General was given the title of Viceroy - personal representative of the crown - Lord canning-first Viceroy.
- Actual Governance to be carried on by viceroy.
- Appointment for ICS [Indian civil Service] - from open competition.

Queen's Proclamation

- Queen's proclamation was made at Allahabad on Ist November 1858 by Lord canning – Ist Viceroy
- Proclamation includes – policy of non–intervention in social and religious matters.

- Equal treatment to all subjects [Indians and Europeans] .Basis of appointment shall be education and ability.
- General pardon to all those who had taken part in the uprisings except these who killed British people.
- Promised industrial development -best efforts to be done.
- Promote works of public utility in India .

End of Mughals and Peshwas

- Mughal dynasty came to an end with the death of Bahadur Shah Jafar in Yangon, Myanmar .
- Peshwas power also ended Nana Saheb fled to Nepal – the last peshwa.

Relation With Princely States

- Policy of annexation and doctrine of lapse abandoned.
- Indian Princes loyal to the British during uprisings were rewarded with the announcement that their right to adopt heirs would be respected.
- No annexation further.

Policy Of Divide and Rule

- Continued this policy – Princes against people, prince against province, cast against caste, group against group and above all Hindus against Muslims.
- Used attraction of government service to create a split along religious lines among education Indians.

Racial Description

↳ Discrimination

- British are superior [Whites] than Indians [Black].
- Social distance maintained in Railway compartments, parks, hotels, clubs etc. Reserved for Europeans only -seen in the public places.
- Racial bitterness increased.

↳ inferior feeling

Foreign Policy

- India's foreign policy was according to the interest of the British government.
- First interest → protection of its Indian Empire
- Second interest → Economic and commercial interest in Asia and Africa.
- Cost of implementation of these policies were borne by Indians.
- For example – War with Nepal and Burma [Myanmar] Indian soldiers shed their blood for British Cause and Indian taxpayers met the cost of war.

Drastic Changes In Army

- Strength of European troops in India increased.
- Ratio fixed 1 : 2 [Bengal Army] 2 : 5 [Madras and Bombay army]
- General principle – Number of Indian sepoys should not exceed twice that of the Europeans
- European troops were kept in key Geographical and military positions

- Indian sepoys will not be given sophisticated weapons and ammunitions
- Discrimination on the basis of caste, region and religion in the recruitment to the army.
- Ex – Sikh regiment, Mahar regiment, Rajpoot regiment, Gorkha regiment.
- Introduction of caste and community in most regiments to discourage nationalism.
- News papers, journals and nationalist publications were prevented from reaching the soldiers to keep the Indian army separated from the life of the rest of the country.

Economic Exploitation

- India turned into a typical colonial economy – exporting raw material and importing finished products.
- Large drain of Indian wealth in the name of salaries of various offers – secretary of state, members of Indian council, civil servants, military officers etc.

- Peasants were impoverished – Indigo peasants of Bihar revolted on a large scale in ~~1566–68.~~ Rural artisan industries collapsed.
- Heavy interest and dividends on British capital invested in Indian Railways Plantation, Coalmines, Jute mills, Shipping etc.
